At MUSC’s Hollings Cancer Center, research into the connections between aging and cancer is led by Besim Ogretmen, Ph.D., Smart-State Endowed Chair in Lipidomics and Drug Discovery. His team found that cancer cells have specific ways to resist the way normal cells die. They do so by protecting the tips of their chromosomes (telomeres) from age-related damage.